Proves Tragic Date

As Another Smith Girl Vanishes

ALICE CORBETT
Smith College girl, the mystery of whose disappearance on Friday, November 13, 1925, has never been cleared up. As in the case of Miss Smith, no motive was ever established.

FATAL DATE
Friday the 13th seems to have sinister meaning at Smith College, the two disappearances on that date failing of solution.

WHERE GIRL ROOMED AT COLLEGE
The dormitory group at Smith College from which Miss Smith vanished Friday. Her absence was not noticed until the following day, when her chum called at the girl's home and found the note she had left Friday still unopened.

UNRECLAIMED REWARD
The check which was put up by the father of Alice Corbett, who disappeared from Smith College two years ago last November, to be given to anyone who would bring information of his daughter's whereabouts, has been taken up.

FARMER GIVES POLICE CLUE TO LOST SMITH GIRL

BOSTON MAN IS HUNTED AS FRIEND OF MISSING GIRL

Miss Smith's latest declared disappearance was in New London, Conn., where she was said to have been seated in a motor car driven by a young man.

According to the New London Independent, a government forester from California on his way to Western field, Ct., Alice Smith was seated in the rear seat in front of a coupe.

The young man went into the store and came out again with many parcels which were stored in the car. Identifying the forester said that the radiator was being stocked with provisions.

FARMER SAW GIRL

While the girl was in the parked car she tore up a letter and threw it in an ashcan, the forester declared. Recognizing her by her published photograph, he drove around among the letter scraps and finally succeeded in finding one bearing the name "Smith."

The information by the West-hampton farmer sent detectives searching today to West-hampton, which is only six miles from the college, in hope of picking up the trail of the girl.

The farmer declared he saw the girl, answering in every detail the description of Alice Smith, on the road that passes his land.

As the detectives were going out on this possible clue the college authorities were beginning a search of all buildings of the institution and were also beginning a careful search of all waste paper and rubbish collected from dormitories within the last week, in hope that some letter or card, indicating a lead, might be found.

The detectives in the case, however, were frankly baffled, as in the vain hunt for Alice Corbett, gone now for more than two years.

Alice Corbett and Frances Smith both disappeared on "Friday the 13th."

Five theories were held today by the hunters in connection with Frances' strange vanishing. The five included the possibility of a romance and the visualizations were:

- 1—Inducted and held for ransom, although no demand has yet been made on her wealthy New York father.
- 2—Taking her own life for one of several girls reasons.
- 3—Eloping with a man whom she met last year when a student at Milton Academy, just outside Boston.
- 4—Wandering away from college while suffering from amnesia due to overwork. She was behind in college work and had been "sluggish."
- 5—Meeting death in one of many ways, such as being hit by an

2 Smith College Disappearances on Friday the 13th

By a strange coincidence, or through some mysterious reason, two girls whose disappearances from Smith College attracted countrywide attention, both dropped from sight on Friday the Thirteenth. It was on a Friday the Thirteenth in 1925 that Alice Corbett disappeared, the mystery never having been cleared, and in the famous college's newest edition, Frances St. John Smith also disappeared on Friday the Thirteenth.

automobile or falling through the ice of a pond or stream.

Detectives are working both in Northampton and Milton today on various angles and theories of the case, the detectives in Milton endeavoring to check up on the reported romance, whose story it is that the girl probably met the Milton man during the Christmas vacation. Through the girl's parents' refusal to believe that any love affair is at the bottom of their daughter's strange disappearance, the story was told the investigators by one of the missing girl's few chums, and the police are attempting to follow this slight thread, as for other clues have proved futile.

According to the story told the searchers, Frances had known this man slightly while she was a student at Milton Academy, near Boston, and she was very much excited

Every agency that Smith College or her wealthy parents could call into service is engaged in searching for the girl, aided by State detectives and local police.

REWARD OF $1,000

Miss Smith's parents are here, using on the searchers, her mother being very widely known, as she was a girl friend to Alice Corbett. She has offered a reward of $1,000 for word that will lead to the finding of their daughter.

Her disappearance took the attention that when Frances was last seen on Friday she wore a fur-trimmed terra cotta coat, a orange jersey, dress and tan shoes. But a word has been heard of her since her mysterious disappearance on that day.

A chance called at her room on Saturday and when he saw the loss had not been seen in the house, he became alarmed and notified the college authorities.

COMB WOODS WITH DOGS

Scenes like this, which occurred after the Corbett girl vanished from view, are being re-enacted today in the hunt for Frances St. John Smith.

Boy Scouts and posse of citizens and police combed the countryside. The hunt for Alice took Mr. and Mrs. Smith into the cellar of the Every House, where holes of rats were eliminated through in an effort to find any holes which Frances may have written.

The girl was extremely shy, and Detective Daly is confident that this eliminates the possibility that she may have asked for a ride from some passing motorist.

Neither the girl's parents nor her associates would consider the possibility of a romance having entered the girl's life and caused her to leave college. She had no male visitors at the college according to her own intimates, and her parents said that there was nobody in New York who could figure in any love affair with her daughter.

FRIDAY THE 13TH

This was upon the theory that the girl may have written a note which accidentally found its way into a nearby paper basket and subsequently into the cellar, Alice Corbett, centre of the 1925 mystery, and Frances Smith, victim of what many fear to be a second release tragedy, both dropped from sight on Friday, the 13th of the month. Alice was last seen in her room by her roommate on the morning of Friday, November 13, 1925.

Attempts were made to link the disappearance of Alice Corbett with the death of another student by the girl's room, but there was never any evidence to show that the two girls were even friendly. The Corbett girl search party for weeks and detectives were called in by James Corbett, a friend, St. Y. Nakano, who joined actively in the search themselves near the college, while Opinions varied as to her fate.

Sterling, who denied knowing anything about the disappearance of Alice Corbett, was dropped from Anderson some months afterwards for being behind in his studies.

Alice Corbett has never been found, nor has the slightest trace of her ever been discovered. The rewards have been sent out by her father from time to time, but without response.

Miss Smith, the object of the present search, was declared to be abandoned by a close friend. This person declared that she was constantly leaving her belongings in shops and street cars. All of her friends agree that the girl was quiet and home loving, did not appear as any dance or social affairs and was chiefly concerned with making up her studies at school.

POSTER MIXUP PUTS BRIGGS WITH 'WETS'

The "wet" fraternity who secretly chuckled at the prospect of hearing G. Loring Briggs, former Brookline selectman, advocate their cause on Friday night in public debate, are doomed to bitter disappointment. Fellow-churchmen and friends of Briggs have recovered from their shock when they were publicly informed that he had joined the anti-Vetoed ranks.

A stirring meeting on the grounds of the Brookline Baptist Church on Saturday evening carried the name of Briggs as supporting the affirmative and Peter Doberty, business man, upholding the negative in a public debate next Friday night on the subject, "shall we let the anti-Vetoed rank."

No record of the reaction on Doberty's friends at his conversion to the dry cause was immediately noted, but the news of Briggs' defection from dry convictions spread over the town like wildfire.

Somewhat called the attention of the church authorities to the apparent mistake in the notice of debate and today it was corrected, with Briggs arguing "No," to the question and Doberty supporting the repeal.

FLAPPER FINDS THRILL GONE IN JAIL

Troy, N. Y., Jan. 16 (U.N.S.)—This is a story about a 19-year-old girl who wanted to go to jail for a thrill, but when the iron cell gate clanged shut her laughter turned to tears and she pleaded in vain to be released.

The girl, Jean Goddard, unusually pretty, lives at Bennington, Vt. When arraigned before Justice of the Peace Harry White in Hopkirk, N. Y., on a charge of driving her automobile in a reckless manner, she smiled pertly and said:

"You give me a pain. You must think you own the State."

Judge White promptly told the girl he didn't propose to listen to such talk in his courtroom.

"Young lady," Judge White said sternly, "if you don't own the State, but I have a little to say on how it's run. Bail is fixed at $125, in default of which you must go to jail."

Refusing to permit anyone to go for her, the girl said:

"I want to go to jail. I have never been there, and maybe I'll get a thrill out of it."

An hour later she was led into a cell in the Bennington County jail, she cried, but she spent the night in the cell.

EXEMPT PHONE COMPANIES FROM PROBE

Washington, Jan. 16 (A.P.)—Telephone and telegraph companies would be excluded from the proposed Senate inquiry into the financial and other affairs of public utilities corporations, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee was informed today by Senator Walter, Democrat, Montana, author of the resolution for such an investigation.

"Not that I don't believe the telephone and telegraph and radio industries should be investigated," Senator Walter explained at the opening of hearings on his resolution, "but I do not want to take in any broader field than the light and power companies."

"I am very hopeful it will not be found necessary at all to have any congressional legislation on this subject. I would be pleased if our senators should be able to get the situation here as no such abuses as call for legislation and the State are taking care of it themselves."

Linn was given a promise of dismissal of his case if he either charges he was peeped against him before the end of the scholastic term.

GIRLS SIGN FOR 'SANE FINERY'

Franklin, sophs, juniors and seniors of the Everett High School—all but a score or so who choose not to pledge during 1929—today renewed pledges to eschew high-heeled shoes, flimsy things and promiscuous display of dimpled knees.

They may wear any of the things Wilbur J. DRY LAW FOES 'DIG IN' FOR 1928 BATTLE

Washington, Jan. 15 (A.P.)—The eighth anniversary of the eighteenth amendment was observed today and from the same controversy marked its birth.

"Boss" Johnson said a New York college professor was in the Constitution. H. L. Hunt, federal movement soon would be the main issue in a presidential election.

At Westerville, an eight-minute meeting of church leaders was arranged today for the celebration.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment declared the celebration a "bad national move because it cannot fail to recall to the mind of citizens the application of the eighth amendment and the prohibition of the eighth amendment."

The "wrecking line of public disapproval of Volstead," said a statement by W. H. Clayton, the chairman, "has brought with it a growth of the association, an increase in its income and both a money and an opportunity for additional work during the presidential campaign and thereafter."

4 RESCUED AT EVERETT FIRE

Kenneth, aged four, sleeping in an inner room, on the second floor, of the wooden cottage.

When Laing opened the door he was greeted by a great cloud of dense blue smoke. He was compelled to crawl on his hands and knees to the back of the room and then led them back to the room where the rest of the family covered.

When Laing, clad only in his pajamas, his feet bare, dropped to the roof of a stair porch on the second floor, running to the inner room of Wallace Malcolm. He gasped out the alarm to Malcolm, who telephoned the fire department, while Laing ran again to his room where he climbed up to the roof of the sun porch on the second floor.

By this time relatives of the Laing family, Thomas and John Wall, who are cousins, came to Laing's assistance. He wrapped his wife and children in blankets and then lowered them to the rescuing arms of the two Walls.

The children thought little of their own plight in their fears for the safety of their pet bull terrier, "Patsy." After the firemen had extinguished the blaze "Patsy" was found burned to death in the cellar, where he had been trapped by the flames.

12 Rescued in Lawrence Fire; Inquiry Started

Lawrence, Jan. 15.—Twelve persons were rescued from a disastrous fire at No. 14 Lowell street today, in the heart of the most congested section of the city, the origin of the fire presenting so many puzzling aspects that Chief Michael McElroy has ordered an investigation.

The wooden building, a small business office building, had today only two of the apartments were occupied. Several of the 12 trapped in the burning building were overcome by smoke.

Jack Tye, a milkman, discovered the flames, and ran three blocks to the Central fire station, where he telephoned the alarm. The firemen were forced to break down the doors in the second floor, where the trapped persons were so overcome by smoke that knockings and calling did not awaken them.

From the apartment on the fourth floor the firemen carried down the burning stairway Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Galt and their four children, Victor, 15, Alexander, 13, Francis, 4 and Kathleen, one year old. Victor was badly overcome and was treated by a physician.

I HAVE a friend in Atlanta, with whom I play quite often, who finds iron play quite impossible, although within the limit of his physical power, he is fairly adept with the good clubs. He gets moderately good range off the tee and with a brassie or spoon through the green, but he cannot reach a green one hundred and ten yards away with an iron.

HAVE observed that the fault of the American people is that they are not interested in the things that are important. They are interested in the things that are easy to see and hear, and they are interested in the things that are easy to understand. They are interested in the things that are easy to buy and sell, and they are interested in the things that are easy to use. They are interested in the things that are easy to see and hear, and they are interested in the things that are easy to understand. They are interested in the things that are easy to buy and sell, and they are interested in the things that are easy to use.

THE particular friend of whom I spoke can flick a dandelion as easily as you please. His practice is to take nothing in the way of "the law." The big man would be equally as free as bird going to the ball, and would like to see the ball turned up to the ball and prevent the complaint which my friend has of cutting under the ball with the blade turned away and

No more encouraging feature of the Bruins' play could develop at this time than to find the big forward line scoring again. That's just what has happened in the last week, and with Freddy, Oliver and Galbraith scoring goals in 1926-27 stride, the Bruins would appear to be started on a great period.

McKenney Dreamed of Being Harvard Star

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

WHEN it was announced recently that the Boston College Graduate Athletic Board had unanimously chosen Joseph McKenney, class of 1927, a boy not yet 23 years old to succeed Leo Daly as head coach of the football team, a position until a year ago held by the greatest one-man coach in the country, Major Frank Cavanaugh, many readers of the newspapers wondered if the printers had not made some mistake.

And indeed, the printers had not made a mistake. McKenney is a football star at Harvard, and he is expected to return to the college to coach the team.

5,450 MILL WORKERS ARE AGAIN ON JOBS

More than 5,500 operatives in Fall River and other mills who have been idle since the start of the strike here last week are back at work. Of these, 4,000 will be working in the mills of the American Woolen Co. and the remainder in other mills. The strike, which began on Sept. 10, was called by the United Textile Workers of America, and returning at 10 per cent. lower wages than when they left.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.

3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in purchasing.
5—Promote in every way natural resources as forests, water powers and 6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Before the Prince Was Born

This Is Queen Mary. Very Pleasing

QUEEN MARY OF ENGLAND, BEFORE SHE MARRIED KING GEORGE

The young dapper lady in her "chemise" gown, tied together at the top, barely reaching her knees at the bottom, will smile at this old photograph. And the young gentleman "sheik," with his baggy trousers and brilliant sweater, may say, "Take it away, it hurts my eyes, it slays me."

Nevertheless, for sensible men and women this is a pleasing picture. It explains the popularity of Queen Mary of England, which is a great asset for British royalty. It explains also the fact that her three boys and her daughter are well-behaved young people, doing what they are expected to do, EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO MAKE ROYALTY LAST, in the face of aggressive democracy.

The tight waist on this costume would arouse the mirth of young ladies who tell you that they "park their corsets" before they dance, and of whom a majority have parked them once and for all.

Leaving off corsets is a good idea, if you exercise enough to develop abdominal and other muscles.

But making it too EVIDENT that you haven't any corset ISN'T such a good idea.

There is a lady-like trimness about this dress, about the hair, the hat, the absence of short sleeves and low neck, that will please many.

Would we go back to these fashions of the last century? We would NOT.

But we wish that the more sensible dressing of today would be a LITTLE more modest, as well as more sensible. We wish that charming females would reserve some information for the men they intend to marry, that they would not allow every part of their anatomy to stick out through a piece of thin silk.

We wish especially that they would stop wearing, instead of hats, little tight caps that look like part of a horse's bridle, making all their heads look exactly alike and utterly destroying romance.

Good-bye, Blacksmith!

Good-bye Your Spreading Chestnut Tree

Under the spreading chestnut tree the village smithy stands—no longer. The blacksmith shop in the village has been changed into a garage, automobile service and gasoline station. The blacksmith's son, instead of a leather apron, wears a white suit of clothes, carries a wrench, and advertises "free air."

The blacksmith's brawny arms have been put out of business by machinery that would make a blacksmith seem smaller and feebler than a tiny gnat.

The ancient buggy and wagon were made originally in the blacksmith shop. The village blacksmith was also the village wheelwright. He might turn out one whole wagon in the course of a Winter. Then big factories took the place of the wheelwright. Now automobile factories have done away with most of the wagons and all the buggies. Concerning one modern automobile factory you read this: "There are metal spinning machines in which hot metal discs are whirled into shape, almost like clay on a potter's wheel. There is a pair of metal presses weighing 240 tons each, and other presses weighing almost as much. One blow from a gigantic hammer will do more than ten thousand blows from the village blacksmith with his brawny arms."

The day of individual work is gone, the day of big combination work has come. Labor is made less interesting when such man does only a PART and nobody finishes anything from beginning to end.

The shoemaker no longer makes a pair of shoes. He taps one part—a heel, welt or something else. The automobile mechanic turns one screw on a machine, or attaches one piece

MICROBE OF CONCEPT IS DANGEROUS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

ONE of the dangerous microbes flying around in this vale of bacteria is the one that causes "swelled heads."

It has been definitely traced and herein is exposed. It is COMPARING YOURSELF WITH OTHERS.

When you begin to think: "Now, look at Herbert. With lots more ability than I have, he hasn't made as much progress in the last ten years as I have made," you want to cross your fingers. You are on dangerous ground.

The only test of whether or not you are going along as well as you should is whether or not you are coming up to what you are capable of doing.

It has nothing to do with what others do or whether you are moving faster or slower than they are.

In a schoolroom bright pupils and dull pupils are mixed. Bright ones, doing only half what they should, and are capable of doing, surpass dull ones doing their best.

In life's schoolroom grown pupils are similarly mixed and each is responsible for doing all he can with the stuff he has.

You can always find someone with whom you compare favorably.

You can always find someone to whom you are inferior.

Even if you are superior to everyone around you, your superiority is largely accidental, arising from the weakness of others.

In other places and other times you would find a host of superiors.

It is an extremely pleasant occupation, this comparing yourself to others to your advantage. But it is a microbe to be scatted.

When you begin to see that you work harder THAN; read more THAN; are more truthful THAN; have a better command of words THAN; someone else, look out. You may not know it, but imperceptibly the cranium is beginning to bulge.

A saving reflection for the moment is the one that in other places are other people who are working harder, reading more, commanding their words with greater fluency and effect, than are you.

This conceit microbe is as dangerous as a railroad crossing.

When you approach it, BE CAREFUL.

Egotism is a very poisonous and harmful quality.

It makes us ridiculous and it makes us unlike. It is about the most anti-social vice we can have.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALAN MICHAELS

UPON the old man's knees the old book lay
With leaves adrift, but low far away
He thought: "For something on the yellowed page
I had drawn time's curtain and, as on a stage,
He saw strange figures in a setting strange
That had been near and dear to his change
The years with slow, relentless skill can trace
Old friends, old foes, old fears and fancies gay
From that old volume rose, as on the day
He sat, directed of the clock of time,
And read loved tales, not on the printed page.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

IF ONLY you could know that there's something about after this life, things wouldn't seem so futile and cruel. If only you could be sure of seeing again those you have loved—surely there must be something—
How often you've wondered about it. And then someone has said: "You're fooling yourself! If life were immortal you'd remember what happened before you were born, wouldn't you? But you don't remember and it doesn't worry you. Then why worry about what lies ahead? As a matter of fact, nothing can be ahead. You just end. You're here today and gone tomorrow—and that's all there is to it."

You've heard that often, haven't you? I've heard it, too. And sometimes that argument always had me stopped. I didn't even try to answer it. It seemed so true and final. But suddenly the other day, when I heard it for the hundredth time, a light seemed to break free in my mind and I saw suddenly what a face and shadow argument is. If you can't remember ANYTHING THAT HAPPENED BEFORE THEN THAT'S A PROOF THAT NOTHING CAN HAPPEN BEFORE AND NOTHING CAN HAPPEN AFTER THIS LIFE, the logic says.

BUT I DO REMEMBER THINGS THAT HAPPENED BEFORE THIS LIFE. The laughing hair, the blue eyes, the shape of my eye brow, my whole appendix, the little bow at the end of my nose, and every other particle of my body, remembers things that happened before this life—remembers things that happened in millions and millions of other lives.

And since I am written the record of those other lives, it is written not only in the lines of my body, but it is written in my instinctive reactions, my emotions, my subconsciousness, my blood. I know it. It is a general record of the whole human species. It is a picture, definite, personal record of ME—ELITE. I have brought with me, to birth, things which no other mortal has brought with him to birth. Good possibilities, bad possibilities. Seeds that I have gathered on life's endless trails.

I was NOT born yesterday. I am NOT as old as the record in the City Hall. I am as old as the first light ray, as wise as the first white star.

I DO REMEMBER WHAT HAPPENED TO ME BEFORE I DO UNCONSCIOUSLY, THINK ABOUT IT ALL THE TIME AND WE COULD POSSIBLY HAVE LEARNED IN THIS SHORT LIFE.

And since the true-alike, I have come up such a long stairway in the dark—why should I be so frightened of the next, short step that lies ahead, or far to lose those who have gone before? I HAVE ALREADY LIVED LONG WAY TO FIVE-THREE OUT IN 1928.

Boston DAY by DAY

IN the full gaze of hundreds of people who looked on and did not understand, Sidney Robinson picked up a three-foot silver champagne loving cup and walked off looking for Mr. L. Taylor of Winchester.

Winchester is a long way to walk, so "Sid" did not stop. It was when he stopped that we discovered it all. Salada Tea Company had donated a huge trophy to the last amateur golfer among advertising men. American League pitcher, turn his audience left the same spirit of cheer. Veritable, like his father, was the common bond around.

Major Edwin H. Cooper, who is a life-long King Robinson's devotee, dropped his camera recently to go to the airport. The major and four others piled out at the flying field and soon to greet him. On the way up and around, several members of the party talked directly with the Commonwealth Armory by radio telephone. Telephone four, a host flying at the rate of one hundred miles an hour was a new experience, but at that the major said there was no waiting in line at changing tickets.

After a lecture or two on some phase of music, students are treated to illustrations by some of the best musicians in the city. This combined with Marshall's personality, is why he has so many in his classes.

Lawrence, readers occasionally have a chance to see the young son of Paul R. Fidler, long a resident of Lawrence, Pa., Jr., although just in his teens, sings, plays the piano and dances. Recently he entertained a group of seven or eight died Boston business men with a musical performance. He turned his audience left the same spirit of cheer. Veritable, like his father, was the common bond around.

Good-bye, Blacksmith!

to it. He has nothing to do with making the WHOLE automobile.

Men worry about the good old days, but they needn't. Machinery which takes the place of ten thousand men will eventually give freedom to all men. Already the hours of labor are shorter, days of work are fewer, pay is higher and living more luxurious.

The village blacksmith worked at least twelve hours a day. Today's mechanic works eight hours at the most, sometimes only five days a week, and he makes more than twice as much as the blacksmith made.

The village blacksmith had no bathtub, no radio, no automobile, no talking machine for his children's dancing.

The successful modern mechanic has all this. And that's only the beginning.

Eventually the day's work will be cut to four hours; that's a long way off, but it will come. So will the week of FOUR working days.

Men worth while will not be idle; they will do different things, have "variety in occupation," which the mind craves. The man who cannot make a whole automobile or a whole pair of shoes will be able to build his own chicken coop in his own time, if he wants to, from roof to ground. Or he will be able to paint a picture, or write a poem, or set his hens, collect his eggs, hatch out the chickens. That will satisfy his craving to do "a complete job."

Don't worry for the good old days. They were old, but they were NOT so good.
